A Spiritual Meditation for the 14th Sunday in Ordinary Time - Year A

The wisdom of God is not like the wisdom of the world. There is instead a contrast between the Spirit and human activity. And the life in Spirit to live in freedom, to live in freedom as the children of God. In this dichotomy one cannot live by both the flesh and the Spirit. We must choose to live for one and die for the other. Moreover, in our choice there is joy and hope walking side-by-side with Christ.

Jesus speaks of the spiritual as those who are invited into the wisdom of the Lord of heaven and earth. It is not the rich and powerful but the little ones, the "anawim" to whom the mysteries of the kingdom are revealed. Also, it is the simple who are humble enough to listen and rely on God. It is those who know that they are not self-sufficient and that they need the help of the Lord.

The yoke that is mentioned in the gospel reading is one that would be set upon two oxen. One animal cannot pull the plow alone. Consequently, the team can pull the plow well only if both oxen pull in unison.

In the language of metaphor, Jesus suggests to invites us to join in the task of pulling. He pulls his side of the yoke, and he invites us to join him in this task. And so, we do not have to do it alone, but we have to do it in unison with Jesus. Otherwise, we will not get anywhere. Jesus invites those who labor and/or struggle to rest in him. In this mutual effort, the yoke is easier and the burden is lighter.

Today, we celebrate the Feast day of our beloved Barnabite Founder, St Anthony Mary Zaccaria. By carrying the Cross of Jesus, Anthony engaged in a determined battle to bring our Eucharistic Lord to all would listen. His words were ignited with the flame of passion. Under the irresistible power of grace, inflamed with zeal, Anthony engaged the worst enemy of faith – lukewarmness, so that we might be transformed by determination to avoid the wickedness and snares of evil.
