A Spiritual Meditation for the 15th Sunday in Ordinary Time - Year A

In Hebrew OT theology "the word" is an expression of the will of God. Furthermore, words are symbolic images. In an important way words somehow make the concept represented by word to be more present. Remember, in the book of Genesis we hear God speaks words, dābārim – and all things are made. Thus, when God's word is poured out upon the earth, it demonstrates God's will, so that God's word which created the world is still creating.

The responsorial psalm resonates God's word as the verses communicate God's bounty showering the earth. The second reading from Romans reinforces the power of the word. When God created the world, he pronounced it to be good. It is when Adam and Eve sinned that they brought death and alienation into the world. But the Spirit of God has breathed into us; and we and creation are renewed. The Spirit also works in creation by already proclaiming the glory of God spoken through the word.

Jesus sows the word of God in our hearts. In the parable of the mustard seed is sown and is an example of how Jesus explained the mysteries of faith in language that his listeners could understand. The mustard seed is tiny, but when nurtured by behavior such as patience and perseverance, the seed becomes a huge tree capable of bearing fruit in abundance.

Finally, today's readings illustrates what does it mean to love God. There are people in our lives who are on the edge of our worlds. They are called friends or acquaintances. Then there are people whom we truly love and people who are truly important to us. As beloved, everything we do or say reminds us how vital are those we love.

For some people God is only an acquaintance. He is at the peripheral edges of their lives. For others God is a friend, necessary but not vital. But important for some people God is the centerpiece of a profound love. He is the Lord, and he is the core and summit and source of who they are and all that they do.

Which are you? With respect to God are you an acquaintance, friend, or a beloved?
