A Spiritual Meditation for the 16th Sunday in Ordinary Time - Year A

The Lord is kind and forgiving to all who call upon his name. Today's readings speak of our merciful and patient God – one who instructs those justified by faith that they must be kind and forbearing. For example, the author of Wisdom deduces that our all-powerful God is lenient and allows repentance for the sins of anyone who is truly contrite. Moreover, the Apostle Paul says that the Spirit who is in-dwelling makes our deepest longings known to God. Therefore, let us always remember that God, the master sower of the seed, is kind and merciful, and we must always seek him out in repentance.

Let us place ourselves in the wheat field of today's Gospel. Although we may strive to be wheat growing in faith and loving others, the weeds of sin and temptation also grow alongside us. Yet we believe that the Spirit comes to the aid of our weakness according to God's will here and now.

God's plan for us is to realize the dawning of the kingdom of God. Nevertheless, people presumed that God the Father would soon send his angels to earth to put all things right. But God's time-line is not according to ours. Consequently, the first message of the kingdom is that Christ has sown the seed, but it will take a long time to come to fruition. Meanwhile, God is not going to improve our human condition until "the end." Consequently, people must make a choice for or against the kingdom and to be patient and loving along the way.

Actually, the parables of Jesus are words of encouragement. In the battlefield of life good and evil co-exist and there will be always evil in the world until the last day. We will not totally defeat it, but we must not give up the fight to overcome iniquity.
