A Spiritual Meditation for the 23rd Sunday in Ordinary Time - Year A

Today's first reading speaks of the spiritual obligation of the prophet to give witness to the truth, especially when it involves the conduct of those around us. Indeed, we are our brothers' and sisters' keeper. Moreover, when we observe people who have gotten themselves in trouble by sinning against God, then we have an obligation to intervene in thought, word, and deed. And yet, we must not fall prey to self-righteousness. Rather, in helping others — especially in a positive prayer-warrior manner — we give witness to demonstrate the truth, giving witness to it as a gift from God and not something we have earned. The one who loves another fulfills the law.

The responsorial psalm is a two-pronged song of praise, a call to conversion as well as describing God who is the rock of our salvation, and also an acknowledgement of the Lord who guides us. Furthermore, “if today you hear his voice, harden not your hearts.” As God was reconciling the world to himself and entrusting to us the message of reconciliation, we owe nothing to anyone — except to love one another in imitation of the salvific love of God in Christ for the conversion of sinners.

As Ezekiel the prophet was appointed by God to be watchman for the lost, apostate house of Israel, he is a spokesperson, in fact a mouthpiece, for guiding the wicked to holiness. In his letter to the Romans, the Apostle Paul summarizes the prophetic word to adhere to the law of God's love by the directive therefrom to fulfill the law.

Love is capable of resolving conflict. Jesus reminds us that he is present when and where two or more are gathered in his sacred name. If God is the Lord of justice and truth, then he also grants that which both fosters community and unity. The power of prayer is powerful, and when conscientiously applied, it draws us closely to Jesus and the efficacy of the Cross, our hope and salvation.

St. Anthony M. Zaccarian Apostolate Prayer

September: May God the Father, who in Christ, the firstborn of all creation, called all things into existence, through the intercession of St. Francis of Assisi, help us to be docile to the life-giving breath of his Spirit, so that we may lovingly guard the work of his hands and, awaiting the new heavens and the new earth, learn to live in harmony with all creatures.
